DATE & LOCATION

Friday, February 25th
9am - 4pm
Ramada Inn, 225 Coburg Road, Eugene, Oregon

PROGRAM

Helping Kids Without Making Them Helpless:
Common Sense Supports for Individuals with Brain Injury and Challenging Behaviors

This presentation is designed to provide a framework for those supporting individuals with brain injury to develop socially and culturally acceptable behaviors in the contexts in which they will need them.

The development of such supports rests on the following core principles:

1. The individual is at the center of all intervention attempts;
2. Collaboration is key to any long term success;
3. Behavior, cognition, and communication are inseparable so interventions must be designed to target each of these domains;
4. The development of a positive self-identity is a critical foundation for any individual to have long range success.

PRESENTER

Tim Feeney, Ph.D.
Project Director of the New York State Department of Health TBI Neurobehavioral Resource Project and Co-directs the research and training at Southern Tier Independence Center. Dr. Feeney has authored over 40 journal articles and book chapters, is co-author of the book Collaborative Brain Injury Intervention: Positive everyday routines. Dr. Feeney travels the world over speaking to audiences about collaborative supports for individuals with brain injury and complicated needs
